

Lowell Milken Fund
for American Jewish Music

Terms of Use

We are so pleased that you are interested in offering Stories of Music lessons in your organization. We are confident this will be an engaging and enlightening experience for your adult learners.

By reading and agreeing to the following terms, you will be able to download three documents for each Stories of Music lesson and all of the audio/video assets (hereafter 'materials') that accompany them:

1. The teacher's lesson plan
2. The presentation to use during the class
3. Appendices with tools and background information

Please note that a number of the resources we will share with you in the class materials are protected under copyright law. The materials are being provided free of charge on the conditions agreed to here. As such, here is the legalese:

The Lowell Milken Fund for American Jewish Music at the UCLA Herb Alpert School of Music (hereafter 'Milken Fund') agrees to provide your organization with one PDF copy of the materials listed above. These materials shall be used in the form and appearance provided by the Milken Fund and shall not be modified or altered; your organization will not reproduce, distribute, or otherwise make the materials available by any means beyond what is reasonably required for teaching purposes; your organization shall not create a derivative work based on the class materials, nor share the materials with other organizations.

The Milken Fund is not providing any representations or warranties with respect to the class materials; and your organization will indemnify, hold harmless, and defend the Milken Fund from any claims made against the Milken Fund and for any damages suffered by the Milken Fund arising from the use of the materials.

These materials may be used to offer the class on multiple occasions without a further request. Your organization will credit the Milken Fund as the copyright holder in all announcements, electronic communications, and print and web materials associated with the performance. The credit shall read as follows:

©Lowell Milken Fund for American Jewish Music at The UCLA Herb Alpert School of Music.